Excerpt: . . . could only happen in a case where a library had more than nine copies of a work it is not worth while legislating for. But in writing figure One let it be made thus, 1, not I, which it is difficult to tell from a capital I. Mark Individual Biography by the first three letters of the biographee, with the initial of the author as work mark. Distinguish from another author of the same initial by figures, as in works about an author. Now let me tabulate exactly what the above scheme of numbers gives us. It does not ensure a strict alphabetic order, but: --(a) It gives us an approximate alphabetic order which, in a large number of instances, will be also a strict alphabetic order. (b) It brings all the works of an author in a given class together, and in alphabetic...
